

“a wicked satire of sex, theatre and cinema” - Gary Kramer, PIGLFF

Fluff at CineKink!

On Sunday October 12, the final taboo will be broken as CineKink boldly presents “Fluff” – an outrageous gay sex comedy that includes a sex scene with mimes. Although several French films (sorry, Freedom films) have shown mimes engaged in heavy petting, never before have two mimes engaged in a 3-way with a haiku poet on attractive home furniture.

Fluff is a very independent, extremely low budget feature film from first-time director Gregory Duke and first-time writer/producer Steve Hutton. Like so many threats to the American family, Fluff comes to you from Canada.

Fluff will play at the Anthology Film Archives on Sunday October 12 at 1:00 pm, as part of the CineKink festival. This will be its New York premiere. Steve Hutton will attend the screening and answer questions.

Web site: www.GreekChorus.com/fluff

Press kit: www.GreekChorus.com/fluff/press.php

Photos (preview size and 300 dpi): www.GreekChorus.com/fluff/photos.php

Contact: stevhutton@rogers.com

“My girlfriend has rug burns from rolling on the floor laughing” – Ranka in Santa Cruz